Drug Enforcement Administration

Washington, D.C. 20537

JUL 08 1982

I have approved issuance of a revised Organization and Functions Manual which formalizes the reorganization of DEA.

In addition to providing the functions and organizational structure for Headquarters elements, the manual has been enlarged to include detailed field functional statements and organizational charts, as well as Headquarters office symbols. By combining previously separate publications, the manual should serve as the single authoritative reference on matters of organizational structure and functional responsibility. However, matters pertaining to the staffing of individual organizational elements will continue to be published in the Headquarters and Field Tables of Organization.

It should be noted that the designations used for organizational elements have been changed. Three Assistant Administrators will head divisions in the new organization; the remaining organizational hierarchy will consist of offices, sections, and units, respectively. The term "staff" will continue to be used at various levels for organizational elements. At this time, no organizational elements below the unit level are being established.

DEA field offices will consist of divisions with district and resident offices domestically, and country offices and resident offices overseas. The size of staff assigned to the latter two offices is the principal factor determining its designation. It should be noted that the term district office has been reserved for large field offices which are not co-located with the field division and have subordinate reporting elements such as task forces, resident offices or diversion groups. The ASACs of these district offices report directly to the SAC of the supervisory field division. Although resident offices in Tulsa, Oklahoma; Douglas, Arizona; Springfield, Illinois; and Midland, Texas will be closed, DEA's presence will remain in all other existing field offices.

Aside from the elimination of the regional management structure, many organizational elements in Headquarters have been either eliminated or consolidated with related elements. The most significant changes in the Operations Division involve the establishment of the Drug Investigations Sections and the realignment of the Office of Intelligence along drug functional lines. The Drug Investigations Sections (Heroin, Cocaine, Cannabis, and Dangerous Drugs), together with the Office of Diversion Control, will serve as the focal point for most operations matters between Headquarters and the field and will be responsible for DEA's worldwide enforcement program. The Investigative Support Section will coordinate the specialized enforcement programs that support ongoing drug investigations. The Offices of Compliance and Regulatory Affairs and Foreign Operations, and the Enforcement Policy and Planning Division have been replaced by the Office of Diversion Control, and the International Programs and Management Staffs respectively. The responsibilities of the Office of Training remain essentially the same.

Within the Operational Support Division, the Office of Records Management has been established, under which the Investigative Records Section, Records Management Section, and the Freedom of Information Section will now report. The Office of Administration, formerly the Office of Administration and Management, will continue to perform its current functions but at an enhanced level as a result of direct reporting. The organizational structures and functions for the Offices of Science and Technology, Information Systems, and Equal Employment Opportunity have remained essentially the same.

The Planning and Inspection Division will assume the responsibilities currently performed by the Office of Planning and Evaluation and the Office of Internal Security. Within the division, the Offices of Planning and Evaluation, Inspections, Security Programs, and Professional Responsibility will be responsible for most of DEA's internal control functions.
